'Helping people to live, not exist'

Case Study: Royal College of Occupational Therapists

Current client of:

Identifying Vulnerabilities, Reducing Risk and Adding Value Through Tactical Security Operations:

The Challenge:

Royal College of Occupational Therapists wanted to deploy a fit-for-purpose security provider to identify and mitigate growing security concerns in a challenging area with growing security concerns

Solution:

Universal security deployed a value added security service in keeping with the requirements of the college. The security patrol routinely provide additional services to the site by covering reception duties and increasing support during times of elevated risk. Full Fire training was given to security personnel onsite.

Results:

Universal Security have been continually providing value to R.C.O.T for over 5 years. Due to the recent incidents and threats in the borough area we have undertaken risk assessments to ensure the protection of our clients at the site. These results have been clearly demonstrable by the length of our relationship at the site.

- Value added through additional responsibilities
- Technology deployed to better manage risk and ensure operational excellence
- A strong partnership with iterative feedback and continuous improvement
- A fire hazard was controlled and extinguished aided by Universal Security personnel who also ensured a safe evacuation
